Course Description

Political campaigns are central components of the political process in the United States. It is through a campaign that a candidate for public office builds a coalition of supporters who will turn out and cast votes. Campaigns are vehicles which candidates use to inform and mobilize voters. Not only do they affect who wins and who loses elections, they set the stage for representation.

This course examines many aspects of political campaigns and elections in a variety of different settings. A number of important questions are addressed including: Why do individuals decide to run for office? How do they go about building an organization and raising funds for their campaign? What strategies do they undertake in order to win voter support? What techniques do they use to contact voters? What effects do campaigns have on mobilizing and persuading voters?

We will utilize a variety of approaches throughout the semester, however, much of our attention is on the practical aspects of political campaigns from the perspective of the candidates. A key question we address throughout the semester involves what implications the characteristics of campaigns have for representative democracy in the United States? In addition to our focus on the substantive aspects of campaigns and elections, we will also spend time examining the methods used by scholars to answer questions about this topic. Part of our goal is to assess the evidence obtained by scholars and to consider alternative approaches. While this is not a course on political science methodology, issues involving research design and analysis will play prominently in our class discussions.

Participation: Class Discussions, Quizzes, and Brief Writing Assignments

Classes are generally conducted in a lecture-discussion format so it is important to keep up with the readings and to come to class prepared. Students are strongly encouraged to take part in class discussions. In order to do this, it is necessary to complete the readings in advance and to spend time thinking about them in a critical manner.

Quizzes will be administered periodically along with brief in-class writing assignments. In addition, I may occasionally ask you to complete a short assignment that is due at the beginning of the next class meeting. These assignments typically involve writing a brief essay on a given topic. This work will be counted as part of your participation grade. All class assignments will be posted on Moodle soon after they are provided in class. If you miss class, it is your responsibility to check Moodle for any missed assignment prior to the next class meeting. Also, assignments not handed in on time will receive a grade penalty.

Book Review

This assignment counts for 20% of the course grade and requires students to write a review of Air Ways: Television Advertising in Election Campaigns, 1952-2008. The review involves answering a series of questions that will be provided at least one week prior to its due date which is Thursday, October 27th at the beginning of class.

Exams

There are two exams – a mid-term and a final (dates are listed on the syllabus). These tests will consist of short-answer/essay style questions. Note that makeup exams are only administered when a student can produce a valid written excuse. If you anticipate a problem, please let me know as soon as possible. Also, for anyone who has special needs or who requires accommodations through Disability Services, please advise me of your situation in advance of the exams so arrangements can be made.

General Policies

Plagiarism

Plagiarism is a serious offense and is not taken lightly. Use of another's words or ideas without giving proper credit will not be tolerated. Care should be made to properly cite sources where appropriate. If you have questions about what constitutes plagiarism, please consult me. I reserve the right to investigate when I suspect that you are not doing your own work. All violations of this policy are turned over to the Dean of Students for adjudication.

Classroom Etiquette

Please be considerate to those around you who are trying to listen, take notes, and participate in class discussions. Please make every effort to be on time to class. Be seated and ready to begin at 6:10 and leave early only for emergencies. Turn cell phones and pagers to silent. Most importantly, do not talk during class. Disruptive students will be asked to leave immediately.
Recording Devices and Computers
No audio or video recording devices are allowed unless special permission is granted by the instructor. Please do not take photographs of the overheads. You are free to use laptop computers for class purposes (e.g., taking notes, looking up relevant information on the internet, etc.). But please do not simply play on the internet, check e-mail, or use social networking sites.

Late Assignments and Missed Work
All written assignments are due at the beginning of class. Penalties will be assessed based upon the circumstances, but will generally involve a substantial loss of points. In others words, be certain that I receive your written work at the beginning of class. Please note that for reasons of fairness to other students in the class, credit cannot be given at the end of the semester for missed exams and quizzes or for papers not handed in. In other words, when you experience a significant problem that prevents you from meeting a deadline or taking a test, it is your responsibility to let me know about it in a timely manner and to make arrangements to make up the missed work. Excuses must be provided within one week of your return, NOT at the end of the semester.
