“It is vain to say, that enlightened statesmen will be able to adjust these clashing interests, and render them all subservient to the public good. Enlightened statesmen will not always be at the helm: Nor, in many cases, can such an adjustment be made at all, without taking into view indirect and remote considerations, which will rarely prevail over the immediate interests which one party may find in disregarding the rights of another, or the good of the whole.”

— The Federalist, No. 10

“Viewed from the genuine abolition ground, Mr. Lincoln seemed tardy, cold, dull, and indifferent; but measuring him by the sentiment of his country, a sentiment he was bound as a statesman to consult, he was swift, zealous, radical, and determined.”

— Frederick Douglass, “Oration in Memory of Lincoln”

POL 332: Topics in American Statesmanship:
Constitution and Democracy
Fall 2013 [“newlier” revised]

Description: Statesmanship is the exercise of political virtue in high office. But, wrote James Madison anticipating life under the Constitution, “Enlightened statesmen will not always be at the helm.” How does our constitutionalism promote, structure, or limit opportunities for statesmanship? How does statesmanship emerge in the actions of citizens in political life, or in the offices they hold? Does modern democracy make statesmanship obsolete?

Instructor: James Stoner (Garwood Visiting Professor & Fellow 2013-14)

e-mail: jstoner@princeton.edu

Office Hours: Tuesdays, 3:30-4:30
Wednesdays, 3:00-4:30, and by appointment

Course requirements:
• Attendance at every class and participation in class discussion [15%]
  TTh 2:30-3:20 (Friend Center 109); Precept Th 7:30-8:20 (Frist 206)
• Five 500-word essays on the reading, due alternate weeks [35%]
  Students will write biweekly essays about the readings on a topic of their choice, due at 4:00 pm on Fridays, September 27, October 11 and 25 [or Monday, November 4], November 15 and 29 [or Monday, December 3], and December 13 (skipping the fortnight that includes or precedes their class presentation)
• Class presentation on final paper (during November & December) [10%]
  Having begun research for their term paper, students will present a sketch of the argument they are planning in precept and will field questions from their classmates; the aim is to help improve their papers through feedback, so the grade on the presentation will be replaced by the term paper grade if the latter is higher.
• 3500-word research paper on an American statesman in political context, due Tuesday, January 14, 2014 [40%]
  Students will choose a statesman from American political history—someone who held state or federal office and who is no longer living—and write a paper that examines his/her speeches, writings, and deeds in the context of his/her office(s) and of the politics of the time. Is there a consistent aim or focus to his/her life’s work? What was his/her principal achievement? Topics are to be chosen in consultation with the instructor by Friday, November 8.
