Course Description:
The focus of this course is to introduce students to concepts and issues emerging in the field of women’s studies and contemporary debates taking place in feminist theory and scholarship. This course is an introduction to critical thinking about the construction of gender and the intersections of gender with race, ethnicity, class, sexuality, and nation. We will be concerned with the ways in which these constructions and intersections shape women's lives. Particular attention is devoted to women’s bodies. In this class we will investigate the past, present, and future of feminism, investigating the ways in which women’s studies intersects with other disciplines and facets of lives, and the larger realm of feminist inquiry. Our investigation will proceed through reading the work of a diverse group of feminist writers, researchers, and activists in the United States and abroad.

Course Objectives:

- To gain an understanding of how women’s studies and feminist theory have evolved and affected other viewpoints within the academic world and wider communities
- To examine women’s lives through a socio-historical and critical lens that engages a full discussion of social location and intersectionality
- To recognize the diversity of feminist thought
- To promote creative, self-directed learning through the research

Course Materials:

There is also a course pack with supplementary readings available at the LSU bookstore. Both the text and the course pack are required.
STUDENT ASSIGNMENTS:

Exams (2) 100 points
Discussion Leader 25 points
Personal Essay 25 points
Critical Reflection 25 points
Class Participation & Attendance 25 points

Total Points 200 points

EXAMS

There will be two exams given during this course. The exams will cover in-class lectures and the assigned readings. They will be mostly multiple-choice, with some short-answer and essay questions. If you miss the exam because you failed to attend class, you will NOT be given a makeup exam. Each exam is worth 50 points.

DISCUSSION LEADER

You will be responsible for leading one classroom discussion based on the day’s assigned readings. You may only choose to be a discussion leader on the days that readings are assigned on the syllabus, not chapters. This assignment includes: a) writing a 2-page critical reflection paper on the article(s) that you are assigned; b) giving a 10-minute oral summary at the beginning of class discussion; and c) coming up with 3 thought provoking questions for the class to discuss. All questions should be handed in to me two days PRIOR to your scheduled discussion. This assignment is worth 25 points.

PERSONAL ESSAY

You are required to write a 2-3 page (double spaced) personal essay about how feminism influences your life. This should be a highly self-reflective exercise. While I expect these to be personal, they should also include examples from class discussion and readings. This assignment is due September 26, 2007 and is worth 25 points.

CRITICAL REFLECTION

During the semester, we will be covering a lot of material, most of which will be new, and all of which will be stimulating and challenging. However, we will not have time to discuss every reading in your text. Thus, you will be required to complete a 2-3 page critical reflection on any reading in the text that is not assigned on the syllabus. These must be critical reactions to the reading and interweave thoughts regarding previous class discussions, or critical thoughts about current events related to our discussions. I hope you will consider how these particular readings relate to your own lives and gendered experiences, although I understand if this is not something you choose to share. You will be graded on the content of your entries and on the amount of depth and critical analysis your reflections include. This assignment is due anytime before December 3 and is worth 25 points.

CLASS PARTICIPATION & ATTENDANCE

You are expected to attend each class session. Additionally, it is not enough for you to merely show-up to class. It is imperative that you come to class prepared, having read the assigned readings. If you miss class, you are responsible for getting the material covered in class. In order to gauge your class attendance, there will be 5 random pop quizzes or activities throughout the semester that will constitute your class attendance grade.

Extra Credit:
There will be a few times throughout the course when I will allow you to write critical reflections on happenings in the media, on campus, or in Baton Rouge that are associated with the sociology of gender. These extra credit opportunities are up to my discretion. Reflections should be approximately two pages long. These reflections are worth 1 point each and you may only do two during the course of the semester. Therefore, you have the opportunity to earn ONLY 2 extra credit points.

A Note on Classroom Environment:

The success of this course depends on the interactions generated between the instructor and the students. I do expect you to participate actively in class, share your ideas and opinions, comment on and assess those of your fellow classmates. However, I do demand that everyone treat each other with respect. Ridicule of any sort will not be tolerated.

Disabilities:

Students requesting classroom accommodation must first register with the Dean of Students Office. The Dean of Students Office will provide documentation to the student who must then provide this documentation to the Instructor when requesting accommodation.

Course Schedule

Please Note: This course requires a substantial amount of reading.
I have spent a great deal of time planning this course. However, it may occasionally become necessary for me to change the dates of planned activities due to circumstances that arise in class, or in local and national conversations about gender.

The readings for each week should be read in the order in which they appear on this syllabus.
