The Republic of Korea and the United States have maintained a strong alliance that was forged sixty-six years ago during the Korean War and now the Korea-U.S. Alliance is stronger and deeper than ever, as the two nations continue their leadership role as responsible actors in the international community, promoting global peace, security and prosperity.

Ambassador Joohyeon Baik, Consul General of the Republic of Korea, visits LSU to discuss the past and future importance of the Korea-U.S. Alliance, offering his valuable insight from over three decades of experience as a diplomat with Korea’s Ministry of Foreign Affairs.
