Wine and Roses Rambler 2022

By Ramona Hill and Leigh Harris

The Wine and Roses Rambler was born in 2021 when the traditional and elegant Wine and Roses dinner was no longer feasible. The new event transformed more than its name, and guests enjoyed rambling through the LSU AgCenter Botanic Gardens on a pleasant fall Sunday afternoon.

If you missed it last year, you are in luck! The opportunity returns this year on Sunday, Nov. 13 from noon to 2 p.m. The 2022 Wine and Roses Rambler invites guests to spend time winding through the gardens and stopping along the way for delectable food, libations and entertainment.

The Rose Garden, Pavilion and Orangerie will each feature culinary delicacies provided by two beloved local caterers. The Gilded Artichoke will offer a variety of options, and Nannette Mayhall will offer specialty desserts. Cocktails, wine and beer will be paired with the culinary creations.

We are especially grateful to our first-time sponsor, the Louisiana Seafood Promotion and Marketing Board, for providing fresh Louisiana seafood – shrimp, lump crabmeat, oysters and more – for our caterer’s special creations. Thank you, Louisiana Seafood!

Back by popular demand, the Civic Orchestra of Baton Rouge will provide music throughout the gardens.

The popular raffle also returns with delightful offerings donated by the various societies that support and utilize the Botanic Gardens, as well as gorgeous fresh floral

Reflections From the Chair
Kevin Langley
Chair, Friends of LSU AgCenter Botanic Gardens

Dear Friends,

What comes to mind when you think of a life well lived?
I recently asked our Friends of LSU AgCenter Botanic Gardens Board to share their most memorable experience on the Burden property. Their answers were diverse, moving and spanned lifetimes.

Danielle Mensman shared her childhood memory of walking the property with her father. He explained the importance of plants and their environment to the physical, mental and spiritual wellbeing of people. She was moved to tears reflecting on the lessons learned from those experiences with her father. She also mentioned how grateful she is to unplug from a busy workday to enjoy the same garden and landscapes with her children.

I believe we are all fortunate to be able to create lifelong memories at one of the area’s best kept secrets — the 440-acre oasis in the heart of Baton Rouge.

The Friends’ mission is to enhance and promote the gardens at Burden and its serene environment for the benefit of the public through educational programs, volunteerism and fundraising. Yes, the mission is alive and firmly planted in the wonderful programs and educational events like Reflections in the Garden, the annual corn maze and others that are mentioned in the following pages.

This year, the mission continues to grow as we align and communicate as a strategic partner in fulfilling the goals of the LSU AgCenter Botanic Garden Master Plan. The new Welcome Center will serve as a gateway to the property, provide program expansion and offer unique space for exhibits and learning. Additionally, the holiday light display in the historic Windrush Gardens will further bring to light the life’s work of Steele Burden’s vision. Friends, family and loved ones will be able to connect on tranquil strolls during the holiday season in a truly magical experience like no other in the region.

Ramona Hill, Leigh Harris and Danielle Mensman, along with the rest of the Wine and Roses committee have been busy as bees. They extend their spirited invitation. You are cordially invited to the Wine and Roses Rambler. Relax, have fun and refresh your spirit as you wind your way through the gardens and sample gourmet cuisine and beverages at a series of tasting stations. The event also features a wine toss and raffle with prizes.

Create a ‘florgeous’ garden with blooming tropicals

Heather Kirk-Ballard

Blooming tropicals are a gorgeous addition to the summer garden, and with so many to choose from, you can create a tropical oasis in your landscape. Thanks to our semi-tropical climate, we can add many of these to our landscapes and patios and enjoy the beauty they provide.

Many grow well in the hot, humid temperatures of Louisiana and prefer full sun for the best blooms. They all benefit from a slow-release, granular fertilizer during the growing season or an occasional feeding of liquid fertilizer. Tropical plants have to be protected from temperatures below 40 degrees Fahrenheit to prevent damage. Hard freezes will kill most.

Now is a great time to add some flowering tropicals to your landscape or patio. Blooming tropical plants provide nectar for many pollinators. Here are some of the best options for Louisiana.

Golden trumpet (Allamanda cathartica) has prolific yellow flowers with elliptical green leaves that thrive in full sun. It is an ever-blooming selection that should be protected from freezes for year-round interest. Native to northern South America, it remains evergreen in warm temperatures. It will die back in freezes. A woody climber, it can get up to 15 feet tall. It can be pruned to grow as a shrub or have a more compact shape. The vine does not twine or have tendrils, so you will need to support it with stakes for upright growth.

Mandevilla is another evergreen vine with large deep-green leaves and pink tubular flowers. Alice du Pont is the most popular variety. Colors range from light to dark pink and red to yellow and white. Because of its trailing and vining habit, mandevilla should be trellised or allowed to spill over in hanging baskets.

Passionflower (Passiflora) is a native vine that thrives in high humidity and can be prolific in full to partial sun and in any soil. Featuring beautiful, unique blooms, passionflower is the host plant for the Gulf fritillary butterfly.

Bougainvillea is a vigorous, evergreen woody vine with thorns. This popular tropical plant offers bright colors of fuchsia, purple, pink, orange and white. It thrives in full sun and is a prolific bloomer. Much like mandevilla, bougainvillea requires trellising to provide support for upright growth. If you would prefer it to cascade and trail downwards, try it in a hanging basket.

Cannas (Cannas x generalis) have large colorful foliage with broad leaves 6 to 12 inches long in colors from green to bronze to deep lavender. They also have beautiful flowers in colors of red, pink, yellow, orange and cream.

Coral vine (Antigonon leptopus) has large hanging clusters of pink, red or white flowers. It is a vigorous grower with heart-shaped leaves and a long bloom season. Vines are drought tolerant, prefer full sun and thrive in almost any kind of soil.

Hardy hibiscus (Hibiscus moscheutos) comes in all shapes, colors and sizes. Nothing says tropical more than hibiscus. Chinese hibiscus, also known as rose of China or H. rosa-sinensis, is the most popular hibiscus. Today, hundreds of hybrids are available in thousands of color combinations.

Esperanza, or yellow bells (Tacoma stans), is a deciduous shrub that produces bright yellow, bell-shaped flowers from late spring to winter. Orange selections also are available.

Firecracker plant (Russelia equisatabformis) is an evergreen shrub with red and yellow tubular flowers on cascading stems. Place this in full sun to part shade, and expect it grow 4 feet high and 4 feet wide.

Giant bird of paradise (Strelitzia nicolai) has beautiful, orange, crane-like flowers against huge, blue-green leaves. A striking tropical bloomer, it prefers full sun to part shade.

Hummingbird bush (Hamelia patens) shrub grows to 6 to 10 feet tall, and blooms are red-orange, tubular flowers that last from early summer to late fall. It performs best in full sun. Try Lime Sizzler, a Louisiana Super Plant.
City Nature Challenge Comes to Burden

At first glance, Baton Rouge doesn’t seem like a haven for wildlife. However, the results from this year’s City Nature Challenge offer strong evidence to the contrary. Every year, ordinary citizens come together to take part in the City Nature Challenge, a weekend-long global competition to see which city can find and document the most wild flora and fauna using a smartphone app called iNaturalist. Out of 445 global participating groups, Burden Museum & Gardens ranked in the top 6% for the number of observations made. Overall, 15,100 observations of more than 2,400 species were identified by almost 400 local participants, many of whom are members of the Louisiana Master Naturalists of Greater Baton Rouge. We are so thankful to everyone who participated. With your help, Burden Museum & Gardens ranked ninth in the United States for the highest species count and 30th for the highest number of participants. Again, thank you to the citizens of Baton Rouge for your enthusiasm and dedication!

Glass House Repurposed

The once seldom-used glass greenhouse in the LSU AgCenter Botanic Gardens is now a delightful display house open for public viewing. The glass house located on the west side of the Rose Garden was built in the 1960s around the time Warren Meadows was assigned to the property as Burden’s first resident director.

We know little about the construction of the glass house except for what Meadows recalls in his memoir. He remembers meeting Ione Burden for the first time and her interest in the glasshouse: “During this first visit, Miss Ione inquired about the progress in construction of a small glass greenhouse on the property.” Once the glass house was finished, it was one of the only structures in what is now the display garden area of the property. During Meadows' time at Burden, the Rose Garden was also a trial garden for bedding plants. Meadows' memoir tells us all of the bedding plants for the trial garden were raised in the glass house. Since then, the glass house has been used occasionally for other projects including our annual poinsettia crop.

Currently, the glass house is packed with a wide variety of warm-weather plants for guests’ enjoyment. Former student worker, Maeve Dumond, and Botanic Gardens landscape manager, Tyler Carr, collaborated on the layout of the space. With the help of the Baton Rouge Orchid Society, Carr was able to create beautiful displays full of orchids, anthuriums, bromeliads, begonias and many other plants.

The glass house is open daily from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. During your next visit to the gardens, be sure to stop in and admire the collection.
