 DESCRIPTION
This graduate seminar explores some of the relationships between media culture and diversity. The seminar will focus scholarship and other academic work that examines media representations of race, gender, and class; audience interpretations of these representations, and; the social context of these representations and interpretations. We also will examine the various approaches to, and methods of media analysis that promote media literacy, scholarship, activism, and ultimately, more diverse media images.

This course is an interactive seminar that emphasizes discussion among seminar participants. There also will be several in-class video screenings. Although most of the course materials utilize critical media and cultural studies perspectives, no prior graduate course work in these academic areas is necessary. However, students must read the assigned articles to succeed in this seminar.

OBJECTIVES
1. To develop a greater appreciation of the media’s cultural influence and to become more a more informed consumer and enlightened participant in our media/consumer culture.
2. To enhance understanding of, and sensitivity towards the various ways cultural diversity impact media production, representation, and consumption/audience.
3. To acquire an understanding of the range of scholarship on media, race, and gender.
4. To introduce some of the critical theories and approaches used in the study of media, culture, race, gender, and class.
5. To understand how race and gender representations are shaped by power—hierarchies in social structure and economic inequities.
6. To enhance analytical thinking, critical reading, writing, and other communication skills necessary for successful graduate study in mass communications.

REQUIRED READINGS
Readings Packet: Available from Athens Blue Print & Copy Shop, 269 W. Dougherty, Athens.
All course readings are on reserve in the Grady College Drewry Room. However, students may remove readings from the Drewry Room for a short time period to either read elsewhere or for photocopying purposes.

COMPUTING AND ELECTRONIC MAIL
Students are required to maintain an active computer account for electronic mail and other computing services such as Web-CT.

COURSE EXPECTATIONS, REQUIREMENTS, AND EVALUATION
All students are expected to contribute regularly to the seminar by participating in, and at times facilitating, class discussions and other classroom activities. One purpose of the course is to introduce students to some of the issues that frame considerations of diversity in media (in the United States). Another purpose is to expose students to some of the academic literature that has emerged from the study of race, gender, class, and media. As a result, this course will cover a wide range of topics. Some topics will interest you more than others. However, you should find the course material fascinating, and more important, crucial to your understanding of media diversity and your participation in media culture and academic and professional cultures.

Most of the course material (i.e., readings, videos) is fairly easy to read and comprehend. However, a few may prove a bit difficult--at least initially. Thus, while your task is not to master every detail of every reading and video, feel free to bring any questions to the class for discussion and possible clarification. Although we may not have time to discuss every reading/video equally in class, I expect you to keep up with assigned readings and videos.

Final grades are based on the quality of written essays and other assignments, class attendance, and participation in class discussions. Specifically, you are expected to:

1. Attend class on a consistent basis and participate in class discussions.
2. Complete the assigned readings for the day they are assigned (listed) on the syllabus. Do not get behind in the readings as the pace and structure of the course make it difficult to "catch up." Class discussions presume that you have read the material. Bring questions and comments from class readings to class. You also will be expected to incorporate ideas from readings in your essays.
3. Discussion Leader Assignment: Each student will provide an oral summary and analysis of one assigned reading* (denoted on syllabus with an asterisk).
4. Complete four essays on various aspects of media diversity:
   A. Autoethnography Essay: A personal and critical analysis of your participation in media culture.
   B. Research Proposal: Develop a written proposal for a research project.
   C. Video Analysis: Analyzes any video (of your choice) shown in class.
   D. Book Report: Select a book that focuses on some aspect of media culture and diversity; write and present to the class an analysis and assessment of the book.

I enjoy teaching this class and place a strong emphasis on graduate study. If you are not interested in the study of human difference in our media culture, I suggest you find another course. The workload for this course is reasonable—not excessive, so I expect you to work hard. I will evaluate your work rigorously, but fair. Assignments are listed below:

*The instructor reserves the right to add to/alter assignments, due dates, and/or percentage values.

Assignment Submission, Attendance, and Other Policies:

Assignment Submission:
1. All assignments must be typed and conform to a style manual for academic writing.
2. When submitting written assignments, make a photocopy and submit the original.
3. Unless you are given permission, all assignments are to be submitted on or before the due date. Late submissions are penalized. Unexpected circumstances that contribute to late work must be discussed with the instructor prior to the due date in order to negotiate alternatives that are devoid of penalty.
4. Please do not place your name on any written assignment for this course. Use only (the last four digits of) your student ID or social security number to identify your submission. All assignments are evaluated “blind” (without knowledge of who the submission is from).

Attendance:
1. You verify your attendance in each class meeting by signing the attendance sheet. It is your responsibility to do this. There is no such thing as an “excused absence” except in cases where illness and unanticipated emergencies occur and you notify me in a timely fashion.
2. Although I support your career endeavors, I will not excuse you from class for job interviews and job fairs. I will excuse you for University/College-sponsored events as long as you discuss your involvement with me in a timely fashion.

Class Participation and Conduct:
1. Throughout the semester, we will engage in a number of class discussions. Thus, it is imperative that everyone’s opinions and views are to be respected at all times. There is absolutely no place in this course for rudeness, discourtesy, and intolerance. Everyone will not agree with everything that is said or written in this course—that’s okay, as long as we create and maintain a learning environment that encourages open and honest exchanges of ideas and opinions.
2. In this seminar we seek to function as a community of scholars and it is expected that class meetings will provide a collegial and supportive atmosphere for an honest exchange of ideas.
3. In order to make the most of each class meeting, it is imperative that you come prepared: Complete all assigned readings, reflect on the ideas and themes in the readings, place course topics in the context of your own experiences, and be willing to discuss and interrogate ideas from the readings, videos, and seminar participants.
4. Please refrain from reading and/or completing work for other classes when this seminar meets.
5. Please turn off cell phones, pages, IPODS, and other electronic devices during class.

Plagiarism is absolutely unacceptable and is grounds for dismissal from the university. All academic work must meet the standards contained in UGA’s A Culture of Honesty. Students are responsible for informing themselves about those standards before performing any academic work.

Any student who needs special accommodations for learning or who has special instructional needs should share these concerns with the instructor as soon as possible.

The next section contains a tentative schedule for the semester. The instructor will announce any schedule changes in class and/or on Web-CT.
