Administration

On July 1, 2010, Mary Sirridge ended a three-year term as department chair, and Delbert Burkett began a three-year term. This change in the chair entailed a change in other administrators of the department as well:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Position</th>
<th>2010 spring</th>
<th>2010 fall</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Section head, Philosophy</td>
<td>---</td>
<td>Cogburn</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Section head, Religious Studies</td>
<td>Sutherland</td>
<td>Arai</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Undergraduate advisor(s), Philosophy</td>
<td>Cogburn</td>
<td>Sirridge, Crystal, Song</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Undergraduate advisor, Religious Studies</td>
<td>Irvine</td>
<td>Pasquier</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Director of Graduate Studies</td>
<td>Schufreider</td>
<td>Schufreider</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Jen O’Connor and Margaret Toups continued on as administrative coordinators, full-time and part-time, respectively.

Faculty

Three members of the faculty received promotions effective August 2010: François Raffoul and Delbert Burkett, both promoted to professor, and Charles Isbell, promoted to associate professor with tenure.

In the spring and fall of 2010, the department conducted three further personnel reviews: a third-year review for Reem Meshal (spring 2010), a fourth-year review for Ed Song (fall 2010), and a tenure review for Paula Arai (fall 2010). Both Meshal and Song were reappointed. Arai’s tenure awaits only the approval of the Board of Supervisors.

Delbert Burkett received a sabbatical leave for the academic year 2009-10. No faculty took a sabbatical in 2010-11. Husain Sarkar and Greg Schufreider submitted proposals in 2010 for sabbaticals in 2011-12. Both proposals await approval by the Board of Supervisors.

Thom Barber, a long-time adjunct who taught logic, retired after the fall of 2010.

Faculty morale took a nosedive in fall 2010 with the beginning of the budget crisis. Several members of the faculty looked for, applied for, and even interviewed for positions at other institutions, though no one left as a result.
Undergraduate education

In the spring of 2010, Philosophy and Religious Studies had 93 majors, 66 in Philosophy and 27 concentrating in Religious Studies. 30 majors graduated in 2009-10 (most in May 2010). In the fall of 2010, the number of majors was 105, of which 77 were in senior college and 28 in University College.¹

In 2010, the department offered 79 sections of undergraduate courses, 50 lower-division and 29 upper-division. Maximum enrollment was normally set at 55 for lower-division courses and 30 for upper-division courses. According to the Office of Budget and Planning, the department offered 4,544 student credit hours of undergraduate instruction in the fall of 2010 (no figures are available for spring 2010). The SCHs were distributed as shown in the following table.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Undergraduate Student Credit Hours, Fall 2010</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Student in Department</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Student in College but not Department</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Student outside College</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Total</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The total number of SCHs in fall 2010 (4544) is up from fall 2009 (4,202) but down from fall 2006 (5,516).

Some of the courses offered by the department supported other units in the University. We contributed courses to the Honors College, both in spring 2010 (Henderson) and fall 2010 (Pasquier, Song). Other courses were cross-listed with Anthropology, International Studies, and Linguistics.

Two members of the faculty received teaching awards in 2010. Jeff Roland received the Robert Udick Distinguished Undergraduate Teaching Award from the College of Humanities and Social Sciences. Ed Song received the Tiger Athletic Foundation Undergraduate Teaching award from the Honors College.

Graduate education

The M.A. in Philosophy has for many years been a low-completer program (one with less than five graduates per year). However, over the past four years, the number of degrees awarded per year has averaged 4.5. This is a significant increase from the 2.8 average in 1999. In fact, over the past two years, the average has risen above 5.0, the minimum needed to keep the program from being considered a low completer. Much of the credit for this increase goes to Greg Schufreider, our Graduate Director, who has actively recruited graduate students who are getting a Ph.D. from another department at LSU.

Members of the philosophy faculty regularly serve as members and directors of committees for M.A. students in Philosophy. In addition, members of both sides of the department regularly serve on dissertation and thesis committees for graduate students in other departments and on thesis committees for undergraduates. The faculty served on 25 such committees in 2010. Such service was performed by Cogburn (3), Crystal (3), Finley (4), Henderson (1), Irvine (1), Meshal (1), Rocha (3), Sarkar (1), Sirridge (1), Song (4), and Sutherland (3). François Raffoul served as an external reader and committee member for a graduate student from Pacifica Institute in Santa Barbara, California.

¹ Numbers for fall 2010 came from the Registrar’s office (2/18/10). The number of graduates and the number of majors for spring 2010 came from the Enterprise Information System, which does not distinguish between majors in Philosophy and concentrators in Religious Studies. The numbers given by the Office of Budget and Planning (59 for both semesters) are woefully inaccurate.

One important activity in the life of the department is the Philosophy Colloquium, which is organized by the Philosophy M.A. students and majors under the supervision of a faculty member (currently James Rocha). They organize weekly lectures and have frequent meetings and reading groups. Additionally, the graduate students organize an annual graduate student conference in the spring that brings in participants from all over the country and features keynote speakers. In 2010 one of the two keynote speakers was the president of the American Philosophical Association.

Publications

François Raffoul and Michael Pasquier both published single-author books in 2010: The Origins of Responsibility (Raffoul) and Fathers on the Frontier (Pasquier). Both have received positive reviews. Pasquier's press (Oxford) nominated his book for five different prizes, including the Frederick Turner Jackson Award offered by the Organization of American Historians. Raffoul also translated and published, with a co-translator, a book on Oedipus in French by Juan David Nasio. Delbert Burkett published an edited volume, The Blackwell Companion to Jesus, a major reference work with 30 contributors.

In addition to these four books, the faculty also published the following:

- 10 articles in refereed journals: Cogburn (2), Crystal (1), Meshal (1), Raffoul (2), Roland (2), Schufreider (1), Song (1)
- 1 article in a non-refereed journal: Isbell
- 9 chapters in edited volumes: Burkett (3), Finley (2), Meshal (1), Pasquier (1), Sirridge (1), Sutherland (1)
- 13 encyclopedia entries: Finley (4), Pasquier (9)
- 3 book reviews: Pasquier (2), Rocha (1)

The 2010 publication record of our department closely matches the average of philosophy departments that offer a Ph.D. The 2010 report of the National Research Council (NRC) gives the average number of “articles” per faculty member for doctoral programs. The average number of articles per faculty member in doctoral programs in philosophy was 15.82 per seven-year period (2000-2006), or 2.26 articles per year. The average for doctoral programs in religion was somewhat lower: 13.61 articles per seven years, or 1.94 articles per year. Our department’s average for 2010, without counting the 13 encyclopedia articles, was 2.22 articles per faculty member, close to the 2.26 average for doctoral programs in philosophy.

---

2 The term “article” apparently includes chapters in edited volumes as well as articles in journals. It is not clear whether or not it also includes encyclopedia articles. The NRC procedure counts a book as the equivalent of five articles. The term “book” apparently includes edited volumes and translations as well as authored books.

3 The eight Religious Studies faculty had an average of 2.5 articles, not counting 13 encyclopedia articles. The ten Philosophy faculty had an average of 2.0 articles. The Philosophy faculty published more in refereed journals, while the Religious Studies faculty published more in edited volumes.
In addition to the department’s publications that appeared in 2010, a number of others were accepted for publication. These included an authored book, an edited book, five articles in refereed journals, two articles in conference proceedings, fifteen chapters in edited volumes, one encyclopedia article, and one book review.

Conference activity

François Raffoul was invited to deliver two keynote addresses at professional conferences: for the Canadian Society for Continental Philosophy in Edmonton and for the Twenty-First Century Heidegger Conference in Dublin. Other conference activity consisted of the following:

- 20 papers presented at professional conferences: Cogburn (1), Finley (5), Pasquier (2), Raffoul (1), Rocha (5), Song (6)
- 3 conference sessions chaired: Raffoul (2), Rocha (1)
- 3 administrative positions held: Arai (1), Finley (2)

Grants and awards

Faculty in the department received a number of awards and received or proposed a number of grants in 2010.

- Delbert Burkett received an ATLAS grant for the academic year 2009-10 to work on his book project: Rethinking the Gospel Sources, Volume 3: M and the Other Sources of Matthew.
- Stephen Finley received the Charles Redd Fellowship in Western American Studies ($1300.) from the Charles Redd Center for Western Studies at Brigham Young University. This fellowship funded his travel to BYU in June 2010 to study in their special collections for a book project on African American Latter-Day Saints.
- Finley was also a finalist for the 2010 Young Scholars in American Religion Program sponsored by the Center for the Study of American Religion and Culture at IUPUI.
- Michael Pasquier was named a Seminar Fellow in the Young Scholars in American Religion Program, sponsored by the Center for the Study of American Religion and Culture at IUPUI, for the years 2010-12.
- Pasquier also received a Council on Research Summer Stipend ($3000.) for summer 2010 from the Office of Research and Economic Development at LSU.
- Pasquier also received a stipend of $2000. from the LSU Center for Community Engagement, Learning and Leadership for curriculum and syllabus development as a Service-Learning Faculty Scholar in spring 2010.
- Jeff Roland was co-PI on a proposal to obtain an IES/NCER grant from the U.S. department of Education to fund development of a new curriculum for middle/high school Algebra courses.
- Ed Song was named a National Endowment for the Humanities Summer Scholar for the seminar “Philosophical Perspectives on Liberal Democracy and the Global Order” held at Washington University in St. Louis, MO, in June 2010.
Professional service

Three members of the department serve as editors of a journal or book series:

- Finley: associate editor of the Journal of Men, Masculinities, and Spirituality [http://www.jmssweb.org]
- Pasquier: co-editor of the Journal of Southern Religion [http://jsr.fsu.edu]
- Raffoul: co-editor of the book series Contemporary French Thought at SUNY Press

Crystal served as an editorial assistant for a book in the series, Ancient Commentators on Aristotle.

Three members of the department served as a referee for national or foreign organizations:

- Raffoul: regular philosophy evaluator for the Chateaubriand fellowship
- Sarkar: referee for the National Science Foundation for the revised version of a proposal in the area of group rationality, 2010
- Song: review panelist for National Endowment for the Humanities, Grant Program “Enduring Questions,” 2010

Still others served as referees for journals or publishers. These include Cogburn (2), Finley (2), Irvine (1), Pasquier (1), Raffoul (2), Sarkar (2), and Song (2).

Public service

In 2010, members of the department gave 22 public lectures in a variety of venues. These included lectures by Burkett (1), Finley (3), Henderson (2), Isbell (5), Meshal (1), Pasquier (3), Rocha (4), Sarkar (1), and Song (2).

Ed Henderson was interviewed by phone by Nick Paumgarten of The New Yorker about the idea of the Gulf oil spill as an “act of God.” Henderson’s comments made it into Paumgarten’s column in a summer 2010 issue. Reem Meshal, as our resident expert in Islam, gave four television interviews to local news stations and three interviews for articles in the Advocate and the Reveille.

University service

Members of the department served the University in a variety of ways in 2010. Delbert Burkett served as Acting Past President of the College Senate, as chair of the College Senate ad hoc Committee on Promotion and Tenure, and as a member of the search committee for the Dean of Humanities and Social Sciences. Jon Cogburn served as a member of the University committee for evaluating NEH Summer Stipend proposals. Stephen Finley served on the Black Scholars Award Selection Committee and as a faculty mentor for the Black Male Leadership Initiative.
Stuart Irvine served as President of the College Senate, as a member of the Research and Development Group for the Arts and Humanities, and as a member of the review panel for the Office of Research and Development Summer Stipend Funding Program. Michael Pasquier served as a member of the Research and Development Group for the Arts and Humanities and as a history/culture consultant for a project of the Coastal Sustainability Studio. Mary Sirridge served as a member of the Chancellor’s Committee for Evaluation of Operations and as a member of the ad hoc Committee for Restructuring the Interdisciplinary Honors Courses. Ed Song continued to serve as moderator for the Ethics Brown Bag series “Scientific Responsibility and Social Problems” for IGERT.

Diversity

Of the 77 Senior College majors in fall 2010, 56 were male (73%) and 21 female (27%). 63 were white (82%); others were mixed race (1), Asian (3), black/African American (3), Hispanic/Latino (4), or unknown (3).

With respect to race or ethnicity, the department faculty is more diverse than the majors. Of 19 faculty, 11 (58%) are white Americans. The remaining 42% are African American (2), Asian American (2), of Indian heritage (1), a Canadian national of English heritage (1), a Canadian national of Egyptian heritage (1), and a French national of Middle Eastern heritage (1). With respect to gender, the department faculty is less balanced than the majors: 15 are male (79%) and 4 female (21%).

Goals

The department has several immediate goals.

- To increase the number of majors. In fall 2010, the faculties of both Religious Studies and Philosophy discussed measures to attain this goal. The Philosophy faculty created the new position of director of recruitment and appointed Jeff Roland to fill it.
- To increase the number of student credit hours. To this end, Jeff Roland has developed a large computer-assisted section of PHIL 1021 (Introduction to Logic), which currently has an enrollment of 184. Similarly, Michael Pasquier has developed a large (unassisted) section of REL 2000 (Introduction to the Study of Religion), which currently has an enrollment of 84.
- To overhaul the department website. To this end, we have begun a conversation with Sydney Nakashima, the College’s webmaster.

Needs

The department also has several pressing needs:

- New departmental office space to replace the current inadequate space in 106-7 Coates.
- More faculty offices on the first and second floors of Coates for tenure-track faculty currently lodged in the attic of Coates.
- Two additional graduate assistantships to bring the Philosophy M.A. out of the low-completer category permanently.

Signature of chair ________________________________ Date _____________