Class Attendance Guidelines

The class attendance guidelines requires that no team miss more than 20 percent of class days each semester without permission of the Athletics Council. Travel departing on/after 2 p.m. does not constitute a missed class day for purposes of the calculation. The Athletics Council approves all team travel schedules that result in an exception to the 20 percent calculation. The Athletics Council also provides feedback to Academic Affairs for competition/travel issues that are not in standard compliance with a university guideline (e.g. participation/travel during Concentrated Study Period).

NCAA and SEC-scheduled events cannot be vetted by the university, and NCAA approved postseason events are not subject to the 20 percent rule.

The class attendance guidelines exist to assist with calculation of team travel; however, it is important to note that the academic needs of each individual student-athlete must be reviewed. In cases where warranted, the Academic Center for Student-Athletes will recommend traveling a full-time staff member to assist with study hall and other academic requirements.

The Academic Center for Student Athletes will provide a class excuse letter for all individuals who miss class in accordance with approved team travel.
