GUEST SPEAKER – CLAY BENTON, RYAN LANDRY, & ROBIN ETHRIDGE, WORKDAY STUDENT
President Joshua Duplechain introduced Clay Benton, Ryan Landry, and Robin Ethridge who are part of the Workday Student Team.

They thanked the Staff Senate for the opportunity to speak today.

Clay Benton began by presenting the overall timeline of the Workday Student Implementation project. As well as mentioned, some of the change management efforts that are being put in place due to the last Workday roll out and establishing some best practices, so employees are prepared to use Workday Student when we go live.

This deployment is for the entire system that includes LSU, LSU Eunice, LSU Alexandria, and LSU Shreveport where all student information will be kept in one environment. The timeline is broken down by 2 cohorts for implementation purposes. Cohort 1 is LSU and LSU Eunice. Cohort 2 is LSU Alexandria and LSU Shreveport which will be one year behind Cohort 1.

Clay spoke about “work sets” which are teams of people who have been working configuration and limitation throughout the work sets. We are currently in work set D which is towards the end of the work configuration time. During these sessions, we are taking a piece of workday functionality to compare how we do things here in Baton Rouge compared to how Eunice does it and we are finding ways to configure the system to allow us to continue to do our standard business process. That doesn’t mean that it will be the same as some processes which may take more or fewer steps to complete.

Clay mentioned that there will be a shift from Mainframe to Workday. There will be 2 moves to production in August of this year for recruiting and admissions and financial aid packaging for incoming students only. Testing will continue during this time. In January 2025, all of the registration, course, billing, and financial aid functions will begin in Workday. There will be a period of time where the information will be housed in both Mainframe and Workday as pieces of the new functionality start shifting more in Workday.

Ryan Landry discussed the change management functions. Many organizations think about change by using the ADKAR model. This model focuses on the objectives necessary at the individual level to enable successful change across the institutions, like LSU. ADKAR stands for Awareness of the need for change, Desire to support the change, Knowledge of how to change, Ability to demonstrate new skills and behaviors, and Reinforcement to make the change stick.

The goal of change management is to minimize disruption across the organization and support adoption of behaviors required to achieve the future state by preparing, equipping, and supporting individuals as they move through change. Effective leadership actions are critical to bridging this gap. Individual success behaviors are supported by effective change management activities throughout the process.

The LSU Organizational Change Management (OCM) workstream ensures that LSU can prepare, equip, and support its faculty, staff, and students in successfully adopting new processes, procedures, and system changes as they transition from the old systems to Workday. Organizational Readiness assess each unit’s willingness to adopt the new system, from process changes to employee readiness.

Communications provides transparent, regular, and proactive communication that ensures community and key stakeholders’ voices are heard. Ensures risks are escalated quickly, questions are answered in a timely fashion and stakeholders are knowledgeable about Workday. Training will develop and deliver quality training materials by roles that match the configuration and business process determined by the project teams.

Ryan Landry is on the Workstream Team and well as Nancy Creel with Deloitte Consulting. Allie Prest is working on the organizational readiness, Samantha Hartmann is working on Communications, and Jonathon Sorge, Aarslan Rafique-Criz and Tyler Wodarski with Deloitte Consulting are working on training.

Landry mentioned Change Liaisons which are individuals who are in the functionally workstreams who serve as Ambassadors to us as a conduit of information as things are getting built out in the system and who are also engaging with communication officers across campus. There are also the technical support personnel along with different advisors.

Landry highlighted a Change Impact Inventory which houses information on what changes will need to occur. This helps track our current state to what our future state will be. Some of those changes are captured by topic, description, area, and institutions which look at the type of change, the benefits or rationale, the number of people impacted, and the level of change. The team has identified some low, medium, and high impact areas with regards to the organization and roles, knowledge and skills, policies and procedures, process and tasks, ways of working and behaviors, technology, and tools.

Landry spoke about the Focus Groups where the training leads hosted 5, 45-minute focus group discussions. The groups aimed to include a cross-section of staff from across LSU who were student focused and were divided as follows:

- Group 1: Academic Advisors
- Group 2: Admissions & Financial Aid
- Group 3: HRM Trainers
- Group 4: Department Schedulers
- Group 5: HCM & FIN users of Workday Student

The training leads also met with the LSU Eunice team to understand their training approach, including opportunities for partnership with the LSU team and to begin identifying stakeholders to support the development of training materials for LSUE.

LSU’s communication plan depends on the timeline and the objectives by phase. Key audiences that will be informed of the project, champion the Workday cause, and cascade communications as defined by the engagement approach include the Workday Team, Leadership, Advocates and End users (faculty, staff, and students). It’s important that we tailor the communications across the different audiences. These channels and tools will serve as the key avenues for messaging and updates with key stakeholders to include Newsletters, Email, Website and MyLSU, Presentations, Toolkits and Videos.

Landry shared the Workday Student Website at www.lsu.edu/workdaystudent which has information about the project, the timeline, any updates, and training. They have learned some valuable information to help guide their approach to the development of the training efforts. Training materials will be developed based on the scope of work and prioritization of business processes users will need to understand for go-live. Training courses will have meaningful curriculum.

Many processes in Workday Student will be cyclical, meaning users may only use parts of the system certain times of the year based on the academic calendar. Users will likely need to reference back to training materials throughout the year. Job-Aids should be organized simply by topic, including clear screenshots, and limiting the number of topics covered in one job-aid. User participation should be tracked. Requiring users to pass a post assessment will create anxiety and frustration towards Workday Student. Training resources should align with ADA/504/503 requirements, but also acknowledge the large number of users that are still fully remote. Some Workday platform training materials become outdated during certain releases. Workday student training materials and communications should inform users how to report outdated information directly on training materials and the website.

President Duplechain announced that the Executive Committee is working with Ryan Landry on revising the Flag Presentation Policy for employees who pass away while employed at LSU from being in service for 5 years instead of 10 years to be recognized. Duplechain thanked Landry for those efforts.

GUEST SPEAKER – C.J. AVORY & SYMANTHA DANDREANO, OFFICE OF EMERGENCY PREPAREDNESS

President Joshua Duplechain introduced C.J. Avory and Symantha Dandreano who work with the Office of Emergency Preparedness.

They thanked the Staff Senate for the opportunity to speak today.

Samantha Dandreano circulated an Emergency Preparedness Pocket Guide along with a Disaster Supplies Checklist, and How to Stay Safe in the Sun Guide to everyone present.

C.J. Avory began by explain that the LSU Office of Emergency Preparedness (OEP) is the designated office for all hazards campus safety, mitigation, preparedness, response, and recovery efforts for natural, technological, and man-made disasters. It provides information to university leadership, students, faculty, and staff regarding best practices for an emergency.

Their purpose is to handle emergency planning, risk assessment, training and education, coordination and communications, continuity of operations, drills, and exercises and to monitor and evaluate the campus environment for potential threats.

Some of the benefits that they provide to campus include the Emergency Operations Center which provides command and control for all major emergencies, disaster events, and special events. They maintain a 24/7 Operational Emergency Operations Center for largescale emergencies. They direct the mobilization and activation for emergency shelters and public health sites utilizing LSU Facilities. They also coordinate with local, state, and federal entities.

The OEP assesses, develops, and implements LSU policies, plans, and procedures to adapt to new and emerging Homeland Security and Emergency Preparedness threats. They also coordinate with communication teams to streamline communications across the campus both internally and externally. They manage the LSU Emergency Alert System where everyone is encouraged to sign up to receive campus alerts.

There is information on their website at www.lsu.edu/oep that includes their current plans and future plans. Some of those future plans are a reunification plan, evacuation plan, and stadium evacuation plan. They hope to mutually aid support for the entire LSU University System.
